There are literally hundreds of newspaper articles concerning William, way more than I wanted to read. He was active in first Democratic politics, and later in life, Republican politics. He was a vocal advocate for education in Kentucky. He went by the title of 'Judge,' and was apparently well-thought-of in Kentucky.

When his elder sister, Martha Jane Beckner McKee, passed away, she left much of her estate to him for the purchase of a house in Winchester.

Death of wife, Betsy

This obit is from ancestry.com and FAG:

Elizabeth Anne Tutt "Betsy" Taliaferro was a belle, five feet tall, reddish hair, and a beauty. Betsy was married Feb. 15, 1872, by the Rev. Mr. Breck, at the Presbyterian Church, Winchester, Clark Co., KY, to William Morgan Beckner, son of Jacob Locke Beckner and Nancy West Lancaster. According to her obituary in the Nov. 7, 1899 issue of the Winchester Democrat, "Hers was a joyful, cheery disposition, disposed to look on the bright side of matters and bringing brightness and sunshine into the lives of those with whom she came into contact. No mean or sordid thoughts found lodgment in her mind, and her judgment of the acts and motives of others was always charitable. She had long been a consistent member of the Presbyterian Church and her presence and counsels will be missed by the surviving members. A good wife, an affectionate and judicious mother, a helpful friend and a large-hearted, public-spirited citizen, her loss will be keenly felt in our community." "She was universally popular, not only at home where she was best known, but also in many other parts of the State. She was intensely patriotic and took much interest in the various ladies' organizations based upon the past records of our people. She was Regent of the local chapter of the Daughters of the American Revolution [National #14875], and was also a member of the Daughters of the Confederacy." She was interested in history, genealogy, and an artist. One of her paintings of Lulbegrud Creek, a branch of the Red River, done in 1874, was held by her granddaughter, Phoebe Worth King, and passed along to Nancy King Paris. Betsy Beckner shopped in Cincinnati, and most of her silver was done by Kinsey, which she had marked usually with two B's, but sometimes with two bumble bees. She died in the afternoon at her home on South Main Street in Winchester at age 51 of meningitis, a daughter of Maj. John Taliaferro and Lucy Elizabeth Hickman. She was buried Nov. 6, 1899, in Winchester Cemetery.

1867. WILLIAM MORGAN BECKNER.

W. M. Beckner came of an excellent Scotch-Irish family of Virginia pioneers, which was well connected in Virginia and Kentucky. He was born in Nicholas County, Kentucky, in 1841, and in his youth remained on his father's farm. He attended a classical school, the Rand and Richeson Seminary, at Maysville, and was also for awhile a student at Centre College. After leaving college, he taught school, as is the habit of impecunious students, although it is by no means a lucrative or get-rich-quick avocation. He read law under Judge E. C. Phister, of Maysville, and in January, 1863. located in Winchester; three months afterwards he was elected city judge without opposition. Judge Beckner was elected county attorney in 1867, again without opposition, and was equally fortunate when he was nominated and elected county judge in 1870. While county attorney he reorganized the Democratic party in the county, and a year later he became the first editor of the Winchester Democrat. In 1880 Judge Beckner was appointed prison commissioner, and wrote the report of the commission with reference to a system for managing state prisons; two years later he became railroad commissioner, and served until 1884, when he resigned. He seems never to have had any opposition; he was nominated and elected a member of the State Constitutional Convention which framed our present constitution, and served on more important committees than any of his colleagues. He was a member of the Legislature: served several terms on the Democratic State Central Committee, and was elected to Congress to fill the unexpired term of Hon. Marcus Lisle. After leaving Washington, Judge Beckner resumed his law practice, and until his death held the admiration and respect of his fellow citizens as lawyer, editor, prison reformer, county officer, railroad commissioner and worker for better schools. SAYS CUBA CANNOT YET STAND ALONE.

Seth S. Beckner Writes Interesting
Letter to His Father—Thinks race Problem Too Big For Island Government.

Marianao, Havana, Cuba. November 25, 1908.

Dear Father:

I failed to write last week but not through earelessness or forgetfulness. I have been spending my leave in the woods hunting quail and really had no chance to write. I had a grand time and put on about 15 pounds in weight and no telling how much in strength. In fact, I feel stronger and younger than I have for years.

I camped on the Gulf Coast where the bathing was grand. There were 3 in the party, one Cuban, one Belgian (naturalized American) and myself. We arose at 5:30 for a swim and then had breakfast, (our own cooking) and then hunted until 3 or 4 o'clock. On arrival at camp we would have another swim and then cook and eat our dinner. We hated to come in but the thoughts of a big

Saturday I go to work again and will be glad when I do for now to our hunt is over there is nothing to do to pass the time away and work is a pleasure. I failed to mention that we killed more quail, snipe and duck we killed more quail, snipe and duck than we knew what to do with. Cuba is chuck full of all three as well as doves, which we passed up.

I see through the paper that you and Elizabeth have been making Billy a visit. I know you enjoyed it. I had a letter from Lucien in which he seems very cheerful and says his health is excellent.

There has been no excitement here since the election but a feeling of unrest seems to uphold the opinion of some that as soon as the American troops leave there will be a deal of trouble. We are expecting to start on our return about the middle of January and the opinion is that we will be kept intact as an army to take part in the inaugeral exercises camping on the Jamestown Exposition grounds in the interim.

This would suit me exactly for I have never seen Washington. Under this arrangement we would be very available for a return to Cuba without any changes in organization or records. I am firmly convinced that Cuba cannot stand under self government. The race problem is too big. Well I must close and go to dinner. Don't give up your Cuban trip. Write whenever you have time to your

MR. SETH BECKNER ENTERTAINS PARTY

H. K. Taylor Writes of Trip of Louisville Post's Guests in Cuba.

Prof. H. K. Taylor wrote to the Louisville Evening Post a series of letters describing the travels and sightseeing of the Post party in Cuba. In his letter of January 9, he thus describes this meeting with Mr. Seth Beckner, son of Judge Beckner, of this city:

"In the afternoon we went to Mariano, the headquarters of Gen. Fitzhugh Lee at the time of the evacuation, and at present the site of Columbia camp, where some 4,000 soldiers have been stationed. were met by Mr. Seth Beckner, son of Judge Wm. Beckner, of Winchester, who is in the Quartermaster's Department. We spent a delightful hour in "Lee Palace" as the guest of Mr. Beckner, and then visited the ostrich farm, which was of great interest to us all. Here we saw some twenty splendid birds, and were told all about the care of them and their habits. Returning for dinner we had as our guests Bishop Candler and Mr. Beckner, and for two hours wit. kumor and repartee made the minutes pass as seconds. Thus two more days have passed, and both have been trimful of pleasure, profit and enjoyment. On to Matanzas, Bellamar Caves, etc., tomorrow. We are going to see everything in these regions.

H. K. TAYLOR."

INTERESTING CAREER OF MR. SETH BECKNER

Is At Home Visiting Family and Friends, After an Absence of Five Years.

Mr. Seth Beckner has been at home with his friends since Tuesday night, after an absence of five years in different parts of the world. In the a spring of 1898, when war was declared with Spain, he was among the first r in Winchester to enlist, and was elected First Lieutenant of the company that went from here, and became a part of the Second Regiment of Kentucky Volunteer Infantry. During the summer following whilst the regiment was encamped at Chicamauga, he served as Judge Advocate of the Division, had charge of the Rifle Range and had other special details, besides his company duties. He was mustered out in the fall of 1898, and in June 1899, went to South America on the staff of Major Har-man, General mager of the Guayaquil and Quito Railway Company. There he was Master of Transportation, having charge of one thousand pack mules and several hundred mule steers. He stayed in South America three and one-half years, living a life of strenuousity and adventure. which is rarely equaled in the story books.

He came home in the fall of 1902 nand after spending a year on a farm, on the first of March, 1904, enlisted in the regular army at Lexington on terms that he should be sent to the Philippines. He was immediately sent to San Francisco, and there joined the 18th Battery of Field Artillery, which was ordered at once to Manila. He was appointed First Sergeant, which is the highest noncommissioned office in the company.

After eight months in the Philippines, his battery was sent to the Sulu Islands which lie south of the Philippines, and was stationed at Jolo Jolo, which has been made famous by George Ade's Comic Opera of the Sultan of Sulu. He was engaged in the vigorous campaign made by General Leonard Wood to suppress the Moros, and took part in some of the fierce battles with those war-like people.

After a year spent there, his battery came back to Vancouver Barracks opposite Portland in the State of Washington, and soon after its arrival there, was ordered to San Francisco, just after the great earthquake, to act as a part of the Relief Corps. Mr. Beckner saw all of the horrors succeeding thatevent in the stricken city, and after service there a couple of months, his battery returned to Vancouver Barracks.

About the first of October, 1906, his command was ordered to Cuba, and came through Winchester, where the train carrying it stopped only ten minutes, during which, Mr. Beckner had an opportunity to see some of his family who were waiting for him at the depot. When his term of enlistment expired on March 1, 1907, our Quartermaster General in Cuba appointed him to a clerkship in his office, where he has been since, serving at a good salary.

Last summer he took a Civil Service examination and passed with a fine rating. His chief gave him a very high recommendation for sobriety, efficiency and good conduct, and he was appointed to a place in the Classified Service, and has been assigned to the Quartermaster Department at Fort Omaha, which is about one and one-half miles from the city of Omaha in Nebraska. His many friends were very glad indeed to see him at home, where he will remain for a few days before he enters upon his work in the West. He is in fine health and in all of his trips and adventures has kept the same high spirits and kindly generous disposition for which he has always been cahracterized.

Nancy West Beckner Clark, marr, TheCourierJournal, 1.15.1897

Lexington was largely represented last night at the wedding of Miss Beckner and Mr. Ed Clark, which was solemnized in the Presbyterian Church in Winchester with very beautiful ceremony.

Twelve bridesmaids and a maid of honor made a very lovely train to preherself up the cede the fair bride church aisle. All of these thirteen attendants were gowns of white Paris muslin, made high in the neck, with short sleeves, and carried six of them white and six pink carnations tied with The maid of green satin streamers. honor, Miss Phoebe Beckner, the sister of the bride, carried bridesmaid roses. The bunches of flowers were very large and their fragrance stole out deliciously as the fair procession passed through the alsles.

The eight groomsmen, Messrs. Jack Livingston, Dan Bryan, Walter Bronston, Robert Nelson, W. R. In her satin gown and wedding veil

In her satin gown and wedding veil the latter was a very lovely vision. Tall and very handsome, the bride is especially striking for the grace and dignity of her bearing and the intelligent sweetness of her face. Her flowers were bride roses and lilies of the valley made into a shower bouquet.

The groom and his best man, Mr. Otis Clark, met the bride at the chancel. From an arch of holly under which the bridal pair stood, depended a heart with their monograms interlocked. From the roof of the arch hung long satin streamers, one of which was taken up by each bridesmaid, forming a canopy over the bride and groom, and making throughout the ceremony a beautiful tableau.

The bridal party have during the past two days been the guests of the bride, and have been extensively entertained. There was no reception following the wedding last night. The bride and groom and all the Lexington guests returned to Lexington at half past eight on the special train which the groom had supplied to transport his friends thither.

A family supper awaited them at the home of Mr. Clark's parents on Second

Her selection makes her a candidate for the American mother chosen each year by the Golden Rule Foundation.

Mrs. Worth's selection was announced by Miss Chloe Gifford, chairman of the selection committee. Mrs. William Sudduth of Winchester won the title in 1950.

The same year Chi Beta Sigma sorority selected her as the "outstanding woman of Lexington and Fayette county.'

Born in Winchester in 1881, she was educated in Clark county schools, at Smith college and the Cincinnati conservatory. In 1908 she married John G. Worth, a mining engineer, and for the next 17 years kept house for her husband and growing family in Utah, Nevada, New York and Pennsylvania.

Mrs. Worth returned to Kentucky in 1925 when the youngest of her five children, twin boys, were eight years old. Mrs. Worth used to sing as a hobby. Now she paints, and is also an avid reader. She returned to Lexington with her five children and when she was 45 years old entered the university with oldest daughter.

One of Mrs, Worth's students is Emma, 7, daughter of Mr. and-Mrs. Joe Brothers. Mrs. Worth says to be a good mother you must be self-sacrificing; to be a good teacher must like people, TENTUCKY'S mother of the year has done a huge mothering job all her life. Mrs. Phoebe Beckner Worth of Lexington didn't stop being a mother when her five children grew up. Instead she took on the job of mothering hundreds of children every year.

At present the 69-year-old woman has 285 that she shepherds at the Abraham Lincoln School, where she has been principal 16 years. She knows all their names, their parents, their backgrounds. And then she also knows the little things that matter so much to children -what front teeth are missing, what knees are skinned, who hit whom and wouldn't tell. The children are as dear to her as if they were her own.

Mrs. Worth is not a run-of-the-mill principal. Her students are not run-of-the-mill children. Some haven't had the material advantages that others in Lexington

But running an ordinary elementary school "would have bored me to death. But this one has been of constant interest. I have to use my heart and head.

'They Come to Me' When Sick

"When the children are sick, they come to me for advice. I call the doctor and nurse. If they need clothes in the hospital, I take them. It's a big mothering job I do."

Mrs. Worth got into this mothering job when she came back to Lexington in 1925 with five children and had to make a living. Her youngest were twin boys, 8 years old. For 17 years, she had made homes for her husband, John G. Worth, a mining engineer, and her family in Utah, Nevada, New York and Pennsylvania.

She took up teaching "so I could be home when the children were home. I started in at the University of Kentucky when I was 45 with my oldest daughter, who was a freshman.

"She beat me to graduation. She was graduated in June and I in August, but I had been teaching while going to school."

45, A Wonderful Age

Mrs. Worth believes that 45 is a wonderful age to go to college. "I enjoyed every day at the university. I've made the remark so often that it's better to live and have fun while you're young and get education when you're older."

when you're older."

One year at Smith College was all the college training she had before she entered U. of K. She hadn't bothered to take the examinations at Smith. A trip to the Buffalo Exposition came along—her father didn't object to her taking it—so she went gaily off, leaving Smith and exams without a pang. She had to start all over again as a freshman when she entered the university.

This time she stuck it out, and got a master's degree well as a bachelor's degree. Her daughter, Mrs. A. Estes, went her one better and got her Ph. D., and is now teaching in U. of K.'s psychology department.

It's hard to see how Mrs. Worth could do all she did —take care of a family and go to school, too. Planning helped, of course, but it was perhaps her philosophy that helped most. "When I went to school, I didn't think that helped most. "When I went to school, I didn't hat helped most. "When I was with my family, I didn't of my family. When I was with my family, I didn't have lived think of school.

Her reading and studying were done after the children went to bed. Even now she says "they remind me they hated being packed off to bed at 8. But I had to read. Eight to 12 was mine."

Mrs. Worth feels that any mother needs time to read.

For she is frank to say that "taking care of young children can be deadening. If you have a mentally alert husband, that helps. But to be a good mother, you must be mentally alert yourself.

"I don't see how some children stand their dull mothers. A mother must do more than keep the children clean. Some mothers can't control their children because the children have lost interest in them."

However, Mrs. Worth added that probably the most important qualification for being a good mother is a capacity for self-sacrifice.

And to be a good teacher she says you must have a "tremendous interest in people. Some people take to teaching and others don't. My second daughter after teaching a week said she'd rather steal than teach.

Visitors Find An Attitude

Undoubtedly it's Mrs. Worth's interest in people that has made her teaching career such a success

People from all over the world come to visit Lincoln to study her methods. What they find is not a method, but an attitude, an atmosphere. At Lincoln the children are treated as individuals. Their capabilities and their background are known to all the teachers at this school located on the outskirts of Lexington.

Parents feel free to come to the school with their problems. On the other hand, Mrs. Worth says, "I do not feel free to go to their business houses unless I'm invited. I respect the dignity and privacy of their home. It's truly their castle and I'm not going to be a do-gooder and come butting in."

Mrs. Worth's spirit is contagious, and the other teachers have the same interest in the children that she has. She selects teachers for their "heart."

Feeling that the children should learn a craft because many do not go on to school after they leave the sixth grade at Lincoln, Mrs. Worth has a shop for the boys and cooking and sewing classes for the girls. The school is open in the afternoons and evenings as a recreation center. Although not compulsory, school runs in the summer. Music, crafts, and art are emphasized then.

Nowadays Mrs. Worth has more time to read. There're no children to pack off to bed. (One of the teachers at Lincoln in a whispered conference in the hall told me to be sure and ask Mrs. Worth about her reading. "She's a real intellectual," the teacher said. "She keeps us on our toes.")

ikes to Read Biography

Mrs. Worth doesn't read much fiction. "Some people think that is highbrow, but I honestly don't enjoy it, although every new book enlarges your vocabulary along certain lines. I like biography, touch of philosophy if it's not too deep I like biography, history, and a painting of a horse farm hangs in her living room.

Her other pastime is oil painting. She keeps her paints and easel-it's a homemade one that the boys at the shop fixed up for her—in the dining room. Her equipment is always ready for her any time the mood to paint strikes. It hasn't struck recently. The last painting she did was a snow scene. One very nice painting of a horse farm hangs in her living room.

She has had to give up singing as a hobby. "I sang until age got me. I wish I had spent the time on piano. You can do that until arthritis gets you."

Mrs. Worth, now a widow, lives alone in a pretty apartment at 160 N. Hanover. Only two of her children, Mrs. Estes, and her son, William, live in Lexington.

Son John lives in Baltimore; Richard, twin, in Fort Worth, and her daughter, Mrs. Bruce King, in Owenton, Ky. Mrs. Worth has eight grandchildren. Her only Louisville, relative is a brother Coll Lucien Beckner. Louisville relative is a brother, Col. Lucien Beckner.
